GRADUATE ASSISTANTSHIPS

Graduate Assistantships can be extremely helpful in terms of both financing your education and gaining valuable experience. Getting an assistantship, though, is extremely competitive. Although there are several assistantships positions in the Department of Graduate Psychology, the School Psychology program has two positions, both serving the Test Library. The other positions are selected based on skills, applicant pool, and needs of all the graduate programs.

All information regarding types of assistantships, stipends, tuition scholarships, registration policies, and the application process can be found on the College of Graduate and Outreach Programs' web site at <http://www.jmu.edu/grad> and link to Assistantships. All assistantship job postings will be located on JOBLINK. Instructions are found there to guide you through the process. Questions regarding a particular assistantship should be made directly to the department advertising the opening.
